

Constitution Day is quickly approaching and I am trying to finish all the little details for our first Constitution Day event in the library.

It seemed a no brainer to me that the gov docs dept should participate in the campus wide celebration. However, it may just be that as a new docs librarian, I am an eager beaver. ^ _ ^

We have 3 displays that have gone up. (Check out my gallery pics). The student assistants did a wonderful job, had fun, and used their creativity. The displays are "the U.S. Constitution", "Signers of the Constitution and famous quotes about the Constitution", and the documents trifecta "Declaration, Constitution, and the Bill of Rights".

Working with the Outreach librarian and the Political Science Department our depository will hand out free pocket-sized Constitutions, candies, pens, bookmarks, etc. The Outreach librarian will have a voter registration table set up. As for myself, I will be dressed in period costume.

It promises to be a fun and tiring day.
